

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for adjusting exhaust flow, and the apparatus has a programmable exhaust control regulator generating a first input signal to a motor control circuit, an exhaust flow meter generating a second input signal to the motor control circuit and a 5 motor driven control valve moved to different positions according to the first and second input signals, the control valve being installed in an exhaust portion of the hot plate apparatus.